

Borrower's Counsel

For more than a century, Hawkins has been a national leader in public finance. Hawkins can help borrowers navigate even the most challenging capital market transactions. We have a thorough understanding of the financing structures in use today, from traditional tax supported and revenue based structures to the many credit enhanced and other market oriented structuring techniques. This understanding uniquely qualifies Hawkins to serve as borrower's counsel in public finance transactions.

We represent nonprofit organizations such as health care organizations, colleges and universities, independent and charter schools, cultural institutions, and housing facilities on a spectrum of tax-exempt and taxable financings. We also represent for-profit companies on projects for commercial and industrial facilities, factories, warehouses, office buildings, utility property pollution control and environmental facilities, transportation projects and research and development facilities.

To every financing transaction Hawkins brings an unmatched depth of knowledge and industry insight. For many borrowers, the technical rules and regulations surrounding finance transactions can be overwhelming. Our attorneys help clients understand and navigate the legal complexities of a transaction and explain how they relate to our client's goals and objectives. We work collaboratively with the deal team, drawing from our extensive experience to find workable and creative solutions to help a borrower achieve its mission.

Our services as borrower's counsel extend beyond the preparation of transaction documents. Hawkins attorneys routinely assist clients with:

- Corporate governance
- Applications for tax-exempt status
- Public-private partnerships
- Compliance matters
- Merger/affiliation
- Disposition or sale of bond-financed assets
- Preparation of materials for investor presentations
- Negotiation and review of credit and liquidity agreements
