

Columbia River Hydroelectric Generating Facilities

Hawkins served as underwriters' counsel for financings of Public Utility District No. 1 of Chelan County, Washington, and is centrally located in the State of Washington along the Columbia River. The District owns, operates and maintains three major hydroelectric power generating projects: the Rock Island Project, the Rocky Reach Project and the Lake Chelan Project, as well as a distribution system for the power it generates. These three Hydro-Electric projects, which have a combined nameplate rating of 1,988 megawatt, provides most of the District's retail power supply, power in excess of the District's needs is sold to wholesale and retail customers.

Role: Underwriters' Counsel

Distinction: Three Major Hydroelectric Projects on the Columbia River

Issuer: Public Utility District No. 1 of Chelan County Washington

Issue Size: $866 Million

Attorneys

- Ronald Grosser
- Bruce Van Dusen

Practice

- Underwriters' Counsel

Industry

- Power and Renewable Energy